History of our Hotel

Kardosfa - the former Esterházy forester's lodge, then hunting lodge - is located in one of the hunting regions of SEFAG Erdészeti és Faipari Zrt., an area of 8,300 ha in the Zselic hills, in the Zselic Landscape Protection Area, at a distance of 20 km from Kaposvár.

Scientists date the first written reference to Kardosfa to the 11th century. In the donation letter of King Ladislaus I, Karán plain was identified as Kardosfa, as one of the swine-herd houses out of the 30 houses mentioned in Zselic.

Master Albeus, the Canon of Esztergom does not mention Kardosfa any more in his census of between 1237 – 1240 besides Márczadu, the neighbouring swine-herd village.

Many plains were described later in several lists, that were later destroyed, and their names remained preserved in the names of areas only. Kardosfa was not mentioned in these certificates.

Prince Pál Esterházy founded a forest estate in this unspoiled area of the Zselic forests in 1641, as a supplementation to the estate in tail. According to the founding letter, the eldest son of the prince with the estate in tail was the beneficial owner of the estate.

Scripts mention only a large "sheep pen" in the 1700s, in whose corner a very old tree grew.

We can trace back some story from the 1800s from official documents.

Because the area was rich in wildlife, and the gentlemen were eager to hunt, they built a hunting lodge here and the place became a centre for hunting and forestry.

In 1850 they built a head-keeper, chief hunter, and later a forester officer dwelling. There were 12 houses in the plains during this time with 25 families.

From 1 November 1890, the Magyar Általános Hitelbank leased it for 24 years, and it was leased out to the Mezőgazdasági Ipar RT company from 1 November 1914 to 31 October 1939. In the eastern part of the forest, the RT. built a 22 km forest railway in the main valley. The railway delivered 150-180 m³ of wood daily. The wood was partly supplied by the RT for its own purposes, partly for local and foreign companies. Partner producers agreed to perform wood production and processing under contracts. Perhaps this was the golden age of Kardosfa.

After World War II, the Zselic forests were also nationalized. The large forest estates were transferred to managed by MALLARD. On 1 January 1970, the Somogy Forest and Wood Processing Estate was founded. As a result of nationalization, then zoning, and poor traffic conditions, the outskirts got gradually depopulated. In 1970, ten people lived in Kardosfa, twenty years later only two.

SEFAG transformed the forester officer's office into a hunting lodge from 1982, where it was possible to accommodate 21 people and provide them with high-quality services. It was used in this role until the spring of 2006 when building of Hotel Kardosfa commenced.

The name of Kardosfa is mentioned in few written records only, it was much more maintained in stories spreading through oral tradition. However, several folk legends survived about its history and name.

- In the times of the Hungarian conquest, and for long afterwards, a sword-maker workshop was operating in the Kardosfa forest, near a very large tree. Swords were made and tempered here even for the soldiers of the king. This is where the name "Kardosfa" comes from.
- An old tree was felled in the Kardosfa forest by a passing storm. It was about 300 years old, so its roots could no longer resist the pull of the strong wind. The diameter of its trunk was more than three meters. Remains of swords, shields, mounted arms, large kettles, sacrificing bowls, and beautiful horse harnesses were found under its trunk. The royal treasures were taken to the castle of Count Eszterházy. This forest was called "Kardosfa" (sword tree) from that time on.
- In the times of outlaw, the outlaw men (hiding, living in this area) were reveling under a well-known very old tree. They threw their swords and halberds in this tree, especially when they felt good. This was "Kardosfa".
- Kardosfa is a crossing point of roads that have been used for centuries towards Ropoly plai, Ropoly motte, Márcadó plain, Denna plain and Zselickisfalud. It has been a strategic control point due to its location, especially for the ones who went to the Ropoly castle. Supposedly, it was a guarded place or fort, protected by armed guards (with swords). Perhaps its name comes from that.
